Candlelight is ranked as one of the most romantic elements that a couple looks for in a restaurant on Valentine's Day – or any date night. The warm glow of a single flickering candle can be the perfect sensual mood maker — a candelabra, even better. And often complementing that flattering candlelight are winking stars from above or a flame from beneath an aromatic fondue pot. Whether it's your first date or your 50th, these restaurants with candlelight know how to set the table for romance. Not near one of these spots? Find a restaurant near you on OpenTable.

Bleu Bohème, San Diego, California

A French rendezvous spot that spends thousands of dollars a year on candles — think candelabras dripping with wax. Bleu Bohème's Valentine's Day menu marries traditional French cuisine with southern California influences including crêpe de homard (Maine lobster crepe with mascarpone cheese, asparagus, and white truffle-carrot emulsion sauce) and pain d'épice, warm gingerbread with strawberry confiture, and caramel ice cream.
